European Language Monitor (ELM 3)

Dear EFNIL member,

this is the final questionnaire for the third round of ELM (ELM 3).

Please fill in this questionnaire and then enter the answers into our web form. Send us the filled-in questionnaire no later than March 31st 2013.

You can send questions and comments to sabine@dsn.dk

What is the European Language Monitor (ELM)?

The aim of the ELM is to provide a rich and complex database (primarily containing empirical data) which will be used for the development and evaluation of national and European language policies. It is conceived as an online system for the collection and provision of detailed up-to-date information on the linguistic situation and its development in the various member states of the European Union and possibly, also, of other European countries. As a long-term aim, the ELM will provide information on the linguistic development of Europe and its member states. The data addresses domains that relate directly or indirectly to linguistic status planning, acquisition planning, and corpus planning in the individual countries.

Before answering the questions, please, read the following guidelines.

- The questionnaire mainly concerns the official language(s) of your country.
- A wordlist containing the definitions of some of the central concepts used in the questionnaire can be found in the end of the document.
- The questionnaire has eight main questions. Each question has a number of sub-questions.
- We are aware that this is a substantial questionnaire, but we kindly ask for your responses to every section of the questionnaire, as this is important for the purpose of this project.
- Each sub-question has a final box for including any comments that you might think useful for designing the next European Language Monitor.
- If a question does not precisely reflect the situation in your country, then please describe the situation in the box “Comments on question, explanation, sources”.
- Some questions are not applicable to countries in which English is an official language.
- Some questions must be interpreted in a specific way by countries that are federations.
- Wherever literal quotations from official texts are requested, you are asked to give the quotation in the original language and in a translation in English (authorised if possible).
If exact data or figures are not available, please give estimates but ensure that you cite the sources you use and that you clearly indicate where your answer is based on personal information or whether it constitutes a general estimate.

If you have answered the questions in a previous round (ELM 2), you can simply update the information and indicate where changes were made. We will send you your answers from ELM 2 so that you can copy and paste wherever possible.

Word list

- Authorised translation: translation made by an authorised translator
- BA, MA/MSc, PhD: abbreviations for academic degrees of different lengths and level: Bachelor’s degree (BA) normally four years, Master’s degree (MA) and additional one or two years after the BA, and PhD (Doctor of Philosophy) normally an additional three years after the BA and MA.
- Humanities: the humanities here comprise disciplines regarding the human condition, using methods that are primarily analytic, critical, or speculative. Examples are ancient and modern languages, literature, history, philosophy, religion, visual and performing arts.
- Master’s program: a master’s program leads to the gaining of a second academic degree (MA). In addition, the master’s degree opens up the opportunity to gain a doctorate.
- Mother tongue: most commonly conceived as the language first learnt and still understood.
- Multilingualism: the presence in a geographical area, large or small, of more than one ‘variety of language’ i.e., mode of speaking of a social group whether it is formally recognised as a language or not.
- National language(s): official language(s) of a nation-state.
- Natural sciences: the branches of science that study the natural world by using scientific methods.
- Official language: a language that is given a special legal status within a particular state.
- Plurilingualism: the presence of a repertoire of language in the speech competence of individuals; it includes the language variety often referred to as the ‘mother tongue’ or ‘first language’ and any number of other languages or varieties.
- Regional or minority languages: languages that are traditionally used within a given territory of a state by nationals of that state who form a group numerically smaller than the rest of the state's population. They are different from the state language(s) of that state (definition based on the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages, Council of Europe 1992). As a general rule, these are languages of populations that have their ethnic roots in the areas concerned or that settled in the regions concerned and have lived there for generations. Regional/minority languages can have the status of official language, but this status will by definition be limited to the area in which they are spoken.
- Social sciences: academic disciplines concerned with the study of the social life of human groups and individuals, including anthropology, communication studies, economics, human geography, history, political science, psychology and sociology.
